PREFACE

FROM the time of the establishment of the Royal Institute of British Architects in 1834 the maintenance of a library has been accepted as one of the Institute's essential duties. By gifts, bequest, and purchase the library has grown from a small collection of books available only to London members into perhaps the largest and most complete, and certainly the most famous, special architectural library in the world.

At first the growth of the collection was due mainly to bequests and gifts from members and friends of the Institute. Thus Sir Charles Barry commemorated his success in the competition for the Houses of Parliament in 1835 by a gift of £20 for the purchase of books, and distinguished foreign architects and scholars such as Percier and Fontaine, Viollet-le-Duc, Texier, and others gave gifts of their works; the King of Prussia gave Lepsius's book on Egypt; the Prince Consort various pamphlets; James Fergusson, Thomas Donaldson, and Arthur Cates, all members, bequeathed their whole private libraries, and other members throughout the life of the library have by smaller gifts added inestimably to the value of the collection and given it a personal interest that would never have been created by mere purchase.

The strength of the library has not come solely through these gifts but through the library's ability to keep pace with the current demands of practising architects and scholars; so, during recent years, consistent attempts have been made to fill gaps, the stock of scientific and technical works has been steadily strengthened, and the organisation adapted to meet new and growing demands on its service.

In the early days, when the number of books was comparatively small, complete catalogues were published at fairly frequent intervals; the last of these, the "Brandon Catalogue," produced in 1889 (with a supplement in 1899), as a result of a bequest from David Brandon, represented the library when it was only about one-third of its present size. This was continued by Annual Supplements until 1930, since when monthly accession lists have been published in the Journal; but such lists cannot fulfil the purpose of a complete catalogue. In 1931 a Selected List of about 800 entries was published.

The essential groundwork of a published catalogue had to be prepared as a matter of routine when the library was reorganised for the move, in 1934, from Conduit Street to Portland Place, and with the possibility of publication in mind the type used in setting the catalogue cards was kept standing for re-use in the volume catalogue if and when the Institute might be enabled to publish it. But though the Institute and the users of the catalogue have undoubtedly benefited from this exercise of foresight, without the generous gift from Sir Banister Fletcher which is recorded opposite this page no actual publication would have been possible. The effect of the reorganisation would have been seen only in the internal arrangements of the library and in the card catalogues. By publication alone has it been possible to make the wealth of the library to some degree universally known and available.

At first it was hoped that one volume would suffice for the complete catalogue, but as work progressed so did the Institute's conception of its duties. It was considered infinitely preferable to provide "added entries" and cross-references generously and thus simplify the use of the catalogue than to economise time and labour and keep the work to a single but ultimately less useful volume. The result is that this catalogue can fairly claim to be the most complete architectural bibliography that has yet been published.

The present volume contains only the author entries of Books and Manuscripts, arranged alphabetically. The second volume will consist of a full classified index. The books in the old library can hardly be said to have been classified at all, either in their order on the shelves or in the catalogues. Whatever disadvantage this may have had in the past, it meant that reorganisation could be undertaken with the inestimable advantage of a clear field, unobstructed by any preconceptions or by an inheritance of out-of-date material to restrict freedom of choice. Consequently, some years before the move to Portland Place, a close study was made of all existing classification systems and an estimate made of the possible advantages of composing a system specially to suit this library. After considerable debate it was agreed to adopt the Universal Decimal (or Brussels) Classification on account of its general advantages in a library of this size and kind. In 1930 the architectural section of the classification was insufficiently developed to satisfy the needs of a highly developed special library, so that before any books could be classified or any entries printed, the whole of the relevant sections had to be revised and expanded. This immense task was completed by about the end of 1932 and the R.I.B.A. expansion made the definite form for international use. The whole of this expansion and the classification of the R.I.B.A. books was achieved almost single-handed by Mr. H. V. Molesworth Roberts of the library staff who from start to finish has been responsible for the execution of the work of preparing the catalogue in all its details. The use of the decimal system is perhaps the outstanding fact with reference to this catalogue, though until the second volume is published its full implications cannot be judged except by those who visit the library in person.

Everyone who compiles a catalogue will certainly be told what he certainly knows already: that every catalogue is out of date before it is printed. The last entries recorded here are of books received by the library in September 1936. But the satisfaction of a need for information about the latest contemporary literature is not the only nor the first purpose to be served by such a catalogue as this. Nor need the proper institutional pride which makes the Royal Institute willing and proud to display its library to the world be rated too high as an incentive. The first and essential purpose is to present a bibliography of all phases and periods of architectural literature which will be an essential part of the equipment of architectural study and which may help to open the wealth of the Royal Institute's library to students everywhere.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

In addition to the gratitude to Sir Banister Fletcher which has been expressed above, the thanks of the Institute are due to many people, more than can be named individually, for help given in all stages of the work, in particular to Mr. Lancaster-Jones, Deputy Librarian of the Science Library and Secretary of the British Society of International Bibliography; to Mr. B. R. Leftwich, Librarian of the Customs House; Mr. N. F. Shipman, Librarian of the Building Research Station; and Mr. J. K. Winsor, all of whom gave expert advice in the revision of the classification system. The printers, Messrs. F. J. Parsons, Ltd., of Hastings, and in particular their compositors and proof-readers, worked with unceasing patience on a task that must have taxed their skill to the utmost.

GUIDE TO THE USE OF THE CATALOGUE

I. THE CATALOGUE AS A WHOLE

SCOPE

The catalogue includes only printed books, pamphlets, manuscripts, and typescripts. Periodicals (except special issues), year-books (other than those of a text-book nature), with other ephemeral matter such as school prospectuses, and of course drawings, prints, and photographs are not included.

UP-TO-DATENESS

The catalogue includes all acquisitions up to 30th September 1936, i.e., all those recorded in the Accession Lists of the Journal Vol. 43 (1935-36) to No. xii (17th October). For later acquisitions reference may be made to subsequent classified Journal Accession Lists beginning with No. i of the following volume (7th November 1936, p. 40).

REFERENCE AND LOAN LIBRARIES

Every entry relating to a book of which there is also at least one copy in the loan collection has a star * preceding the title in the author section. A few books not in the Reference Library are marked 'Loan Library only'.

ACCURACY

The Editors make no claims for the final accuracy of the catalogue, though it is probable that few entries have survived from previous catalogues without close critical attention. Many of the entries, especially of older works, have been compared with entries in the British Museum and other authoritative catalogues. Small variations in practice due to the varying forms of original material and the several hands through which they have passed have been minimised as much as possible. In a few cases titles of manuscripts have been abbreviated. The entries for the oldest books contain, it is hoped, the essentials of full standard entries, and government publications have been catalogued individually with great care.

ARRANGEMENT

The main divisions of the catalogue are :

- Vol. I: 1. Author catalogue (alphabetical), the present volume.
- Vol. II: 2. Classified subject index.
- 3. Alphabetical subject index to classified section.

The classified rather than the alphabetical principle for the subject section has been adopted on account of its convenience in showing subjects in their mutual relationship, which it is hoped will more than compensate for the slight labour of the double reference involved. Its correspondence with the actual shelf arrangement may also be an assistance to those able to visit the library.

Most special library catalogues are either author catalogues with condensed alphabetical title or subject indexes, or classified catalogues with small-type author indexes. On the principle that the general utility of an author catalogue need not exclude the classified system, a method the reverse of the second precedent has been adopted, it is believed for the first time.

METHOD OF USE

To find—

a book by a given author, look in the author catalogue (the present volume).

a book of a given title, if anonymous look under that title in the author catalogue, otherwise under likely subjects as described below.

books on a given subject, look under that subject in the alphabetical index (end of Vol. II) which gives the class-number, then in the classified index (early part of Vol. II) under that number. For books on a given subject in a stated place or period (e.g. German cinemas or Tudor houses) or on two related subjects (e.g. lighting of churches) look up each subsidiary item in the alphabetical index and find its number in the class section following that of the main subject—in the first case in round brackets (), in the second beginning .03 . . . , in the third following a colon : .

all books on a given country or place, whatever the subject, look under the name of the place in the alphabetical subject index, then in the classified index under the topographical number (91 followed by the number), where names of general works are followed by references to all subjects bearing on the place (except where too numerous to be detailed).

The detailed indications following will probably not be needed by the ordinary reader consulting the catalogue.

II. AUTHOR CATALOGUE

CATALOGUING RULES

The author cataloguing generally follows the Library Association (Anglo-American) Cataloguing Rules, except that anonymous main entries follow the British Museum or Bodleian rules, institutions in London are put under their names instead of under 'London', the variations governing titles beginning 'Royal' &c. are ignored, and English government departments are entered under their names instead of under 'England'. Authors' forenames are generally given in full when there is only one, otherwise initials suffice except for distinctive forenames and in the case of authors of early works. Numbers are used to distinguish authors of the same name.

ADDED ENTRIES

Added entries for joint authors, translators, editors, and series titles are given more amply than is strictly necessary, so that the essential information is given on first reference, to obviate the annoyance of insufficient entries without titles and fruitless consultations.

ALPHABETICAL SEQUENCE OF TITLES

Works by the same author are arranged in one alphabetical (not chronological) sequence, including those in which he acted as secondary joint author, the full headings for these being indented and the normal headings being repeated afterwards. This, though possibly confusing at first inspection, is thought to simplify consultation. E.g. --

18s. R. & P. (2).

Where the author has produced several editions of an earlier author with varying titles these are, however, kept together to avoid repetition.

ALPHABETISATION AND CAPITALISATION

Alphabetisation throughout ignores spaces and small words, e.g. 'Eastern' precedes 'East Suffolk', and 'Society of Antiquaries' precedes 'Society for the Promotion'.

Capitalisation in the earlier works follows that of the title-page, but not otherwise. German nouns, in accordance with the L.A. rules, are generally not capitalised.

I and J, U and V. For the earlier books these letters for simplicity and the avoidance of ambiguity are shown as on the original, even where reduced from capitals to lower-case.

COLLATION AND IMPRINT

The catalogue entries for earlier accessions retain the brief form used in the last published catalogue; those for acquisitions since about 1931, when the Accession Lists were started in the Journal, have a fuller form, assimilating that of the Library Association rules to journalistic practice. The format of the previous accessions is an approximation; that of early books is bibliographically correct, and that of recent works gives way to size in inches. The place-name is in the English form, but follows the title-page in the case of earlier books.

SERIES ENTRIES

These are usually fully enumerated, a main entry or adequate reference appearing under the name of the individual author.

ILLUSTRATIONS

Eleven reproductions from prints in the earlier works of the library appear as head-pieces at the beginning of approximately every other letter series throughout the catalogue.

ABBREVIATIONS IN OR OVER CLASS-NUMBERS : FINDING MARKS

The following abbreviations preceding or above the class-numbers show the positions of those documents in the Reference Library which are not, as normally, shelved under their class-numbers:

- × R.I.B.A. publications and affairs.
- E.W. Early works, including incunabula.
- G.P. Government publications (unclassifiable).
Most state papers are distributed throughout the Library according to subject; these are volumes containing matter on several subjects and shelved apart.
- MS. Manuscripts.
- MS. SP. Manuscripts of Sessional Papers read to the R.I.B.A.
- . . . pam. . . Pamphlet volumes shelved by collective subjects.
- pam. . . Pamphlet volumes shelved apart.

Most recent pamphlets are placed on the shelves with the books; these volumes in which older ones are bound are distributed on the shelves among other works according to the subjects of the whole volumes, but retain the consecutive numberings (pam. 01, &c. ; pam. 1, &c. ; and pam. Q. 1, &c.) which were adopted when they were kept together. Every pamphlet is separately catalogued, with the class-number and consecutive number of the volume in which it occurs shown over the class-number, thus :—

352 (42.1) pam. 80
711.7—163 (42.1)

These should therefore be looked for under the first class-number.
Those pamphlets whose entries have no class-number preceding the pamphlet-volumes number, thus :—

pam. 03
711.585

are in certain volumes which could not be classified and are shelved together out of series.

- S.R. Store-room series.

ROYAL INSTITUTE OF BRITISH ARCHITECTS, formerly INSTITUTE OF BRITISH ARCHITECTS

The title Royal Institute, &c., was used from the granting of the Royal Charter in 1837, and officially granted in 1866.

Entries under this heading are given with fuller information, including in some cases Journal entries, for completeness of reference.

The reports of committees are arranged as subheadings following the entries relating to ordinary Institute publications, e.g.,

R.I.B.A. : SCIENCE STANDING COMMITTEE

Works are arranged alphabetically, each usually under the first word of the title.

To keep the publications together on certain outstanding subjects, however, that subject is first given in [], e.g. :

[Examinations.] The . . .

A reference is then given from the first word of the title.

VITRUVIUS, incorrectly known as VITRUVIUS POLLIO
(MARCUS)

De architectura.

[All the ancient manuscripts of Vitruvius and, following them, the modern critical editions of Rose and Krohn and Granger omit the praenomen variously given as Lucius or Marcus and the cognomen Pollio. The editio princeps took Lucius from an inscription containing the name 'Vitruvius'; Fra Giocondo went to a similar source for Marcus. But there is no evidence that either of these inscriptions referred to the author of the De architectura.

The cognomen Pollio is due to a misunderstanding of the Epitome of Faventinus where Pollio follows Vitruvius as a writer on architecture and the two names are taken as referring to the same person. Although Rose's text was published in 1867, these errors have been repeated by English writers right down to the last edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica in which the necessary corrections are made.]

[The entries are arranged first by language—Latin, Latin and other languages, English, German, French, Italian, and Spanish—and then chronologically, with certain exceptions to bring editions by the same editor together.

The use of u and v, i and j, is for simplicity and the avoidance of ambiguity shown exactly, even where reduced from capitals to lower-case, e.g.

Vitruui appears as Vitruuii
VITRVVII " " Vitrvvii.]
